prected by residents of New London necticut College for Women, is to be the siogan of a campaign to be conducted this summer by Prof. Colin S. Buell of New London of the board of trustees for the purpose of raising a fund of $200,000. To Professor Buell has been entrusted the task of securing additional funds, for the establishment of the institution and both he and his associates on the board are confident that success will crown his efforts.

The plan to be followed in the New London county campaign is briefly this: Forty residents of the county possessing ample means to do so are to be requested to contribute $5,000 each. From the fact that several promises of amounts equal to or larger than that indicated are already in hand it is believed that the larger proposition will not prove difficult. Numerous persons of wealth who have declared their intention to contribute to the establishment of the institution have delayed doing so pending the actual breaking of ground for building have delayed doing so pending the ac-tual breaking of ground for building Inasmuch as this event is now but a few days' distant, it is the feeling of few days' distant, it is the feeling of the trustees that the psychological mo-ment has arrived to issue an appeal to the liberality of those whose resi-dence is in the immediate vicinity of the college and whose daughters or young women friends will be especially benefitted by its establishment. It is likewise felt that when the people of this particular section of the state have done their part in promoting the wel-fare of the new seat of learning, such action will prove an incentive to those action will prove an incentive to those living at more remote points to assist in the organization of a college whose objective point was recently described by President Sykes as "an institution the most beautiful and spacious, the widest in scope of instruction, the the contract price, but not of an amount sufficient to warrant another building.

At the present time a refectory or dining hall is needed more than anything else. The central power house can wait until a much larger group of buildings has been constructed and, in fact, would not be economical for the present small group. The refectory would not cost anywhere near $200,000; in fact, could probably be built for approximately $50,000. However, should the total sum suggested in the present proposition be obtained, both the refectory and another dormitory could be named in honor of the residents of New London county who made them possible.

The plan of the refectory as designed by the college architects, Ewing & Chappell, is original and unique. The idea in dividing into eight dining rooms is twofold. In the first place it does not be in the first place in the first place in the first place. ing rooms is twofold. In the first place it does away with the institutional aspect of a vast ball seating row on row of students, under which conditions the service is apt to be far from satisfactory. In the second place it permits the temporary use of some of the dining rooms for recitation purposes until other buildings are built. The refectory will furnish seating capacity for over 500 students at a single sitting.

Professor Buell said Saturday morning he was confident that before the end of the summer ample funds for at least one other building would have been pledged. He will start at once touring the county in the interest of the proposition outlined herewith.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE AT LORDS POINT CROSSING Incident in Mrs. L. F. Lapierre's Experience Narrated at Hearing.

Public Utility Commissioner John H. He said he would make the decision later. The interests of the town were cared for by the town's attorney. Frank Hinckby the town's attorney Frank Hinck-ley and Aftorney N. S. All the witnesses in the case were called upon by the town and the testimoney of all of them, most of whom have been summer residents of Lord's Point for several years, was to the effect that the crossing was an unusually dangerous one and that there ought to be furnished some protection for the public traffic, Dr. L. He explained that 300 feet north of the crossing a high bank feet north of the crossing a high bank and ledge prevented one's seeing trains approaching from the west, and that to be sure that there was nothing coming one was obliged to step out onto the eastbound tracks. Both wind and fog, he said, contributed to the danger. The gates, he said, were often left open and a number of his cattle had been killed. Further testimony to the danger of the crossing and the need for protection of some sore was given by Warren L. Bradway of Putnam, Ernest L. Davis of the same place, Edward M. Tolland Republicans Would Like South Willington Manufacturer For Sena-tor-The Difficulty.

A political writer in the Hartford A political writer in the Hartford Times says:
The republicans of Tolland county are in a quandary. They know that they are expected to elect their senator this year. The county is coextensive with the district and the influences which prevail in the county convention are likely to dictate the nomination for senator. Quite a large number of the republicans of the district are in favor of the nomination of Colonel William H. Hall of Willington, for the senate. It is felt, however, that in the selection of senatorial candidates it is necessary to nominate men from the It is felt, however, that in the selection of senatorial candidates it is necessary to nominate men from the centers of population. Stafford is, next to Vernon, the most populous town in the district and some of the republican leaders think that it would be the part of political wisdom to go to that town for the candidate for senator. Their choice is John D. Wightman, chairman of republican town committee of Stafford. Mr. Wightman was formerly a member of the board of county commissioners for Tolland county and was the chairman of the board. His friends have never been reconciled to the manner in which he was superseded on the board. It is said that up to the morning of the caucus he was certain of being renominated. This certainly in prediction was not, however, realized by the action of the caucus. Another gentleman, Rufus H. Leonard. of Vernon, was nominated. That left a sore which still smarts. A viliage of tents sprang up on the state military reservation in Niantic Saturday morning in a few hours when the First and Second regiments of infantry of the Connecticut National Guard marched in to begin their annual tour of duty in the field. With flags flying and bands playing lively airs the commands stepped at a lively pace after detraining at the Niantic station, and made the short march to the camp grounds. The Second regiment under command of Col. Charles F. McCabe and accompanied by First Separate company and Signal corps, arrived at 8.45 a.m., and the First regiment under Col. John Hickey came in from Hartford shortly before 10 o'clock. The work of detraining was accomplished quickly and smoothly. The chief incident, however, was when 28 horses of the signal corps boilted after being taken out of the cars and then scattered through the nearby fields. It took three hours to round them up.
